Superintendent Michael Files Report In Relation To School Property—Expect 100 More Students To Enter High School In January—Requests For Use of Auditorium Granted.

A short adjourned meeting of the board of education was held Friday evening at the offices of the board. The meeting was held a week prior to the regular meeting night on account of the schools closing for the annual Christmas holiday season. Trustees Terry, Walter, Katz, Mathews and President Flemming were present.

Communications were read from the High School Letter Club asking use of the gym on the evening of December 27 for a dance; the Junior Class for use of the gym for their annual dance and requests from the Veterans of Foreign Wars for use of the auditorium on February 10 and 11 for their annual benefit show, and Rapid Hose for permission to use the auditorium on February 3 and 4 for a minstrel show. All requests were granted subject to the terms imposed.

The payrolls for November and December which were audited by the president and superintendent according to authority given at the last meeting, were entered. Bills amounting to $7,192.27 were ordered paid. A check for $1,514.44 from the Federal Cooperative Vocational Fund was received and deposited with the city treasurer. This fund comes from the federal fund and is applied $600 for part time teacher and the remainder for part vocational work.

A request from Mr. Service for a typewriter for school use was referred to the supplies committee.

The matter of giving additional heat in Principal Finnerty's office at No. 7 school was referred to the building committee, with power. It is impossible to give the office steam through the present equipment unless the boiler is forced. An additional radiator is expected to give the needed heat. At present the room cannot be heated beyond 65 degrees in cold weather.

In order to relieve the congested condition at No. 8 school, a helping teacher was placed in the school last fall. She has no home room and must share her room with another teacher. This condition can be remedied by placing a partition in one of the large rooms. Material is on hand from No. 2 and other schools. Referred to the building committee with power to be taken care of during the vacation period.

The matter of repairing the steam line at No. 2 school to give additional heat in Miss Finn's room was also referred to the building committee with power. The pipes have sagged and there is an air pocket which prevents circulation of the steam to the room.

The building committee was also authorized to have an office at No. 5 school erected at a cost of $350.

With the mid-term students to be taken in at the high school on the last Monday in January expected to number about 100, additional locker room is needed. The supplies committee was authorized to procure 50 additional lockers which will be placed in various places about the corridors. These lockers will be used later in the new addition now under construction.

Physical Condition of Schools.
To the Board of Education.
I respectfully submit the following report on the condition of the physical plant of the public schools under your jurisdiction. Since August first, repairs and permanent improvements have been made as follows. Most of this work was done during the summer vacation.

School No. 1—Repairs on heating plant and painting, putting this school in excellent condition. $186.72.

School No. 2—Repairs including painting, repairs to boiler, and material, $577.30. Permanent improvements including installation of new toilets and a small addition to the building to accommodate same. Material, mason work and carpenter work $6,363.17; total expenditures for permanent improvements and repairs on school No. 2, $6,940.47.

Pursuant to your plan of modernizing our grammar school buildings in so far as it is possible, the old unsanitary toilets in the basement of this school have been removed and new modern sanitary toilets placed on the second floor of the building. During the vacation of 1928 one half of the interior of this building was redecorated, and during the recent summer vacation redecoration of the balance of the building was completed. The interior of the building presents a cheerful and attractive appearance. The desks and other furniture are modern and substantial.

School No. 3—Repairs including painting and general repairs on roof, $342.97. Permanent improvements including from fence in the rear of the building, mason work, new metal ceilings $781.45, making a

Adjourn Hearing In Walter Case To December 27

Lawrence Wilbur Mas Attorney Assigned to Look After His Interests—Judge Fowler Wants More Time to Investigate Case.

Lawrence Wilbur, the 15-year-old boy who shot and killed his younger brother and sister at the family home in Sight Valley, back of Wilbur, was arraigned in children's court before County Judge Joseph M. Fowler this morning. The charge lodged against the boy is that of juvenile delinquency.

The boy's father and a sister were in children's court this morning, and Judge Fowler announced that he desired more time to make a further investigation of the affair before deciding what disposition to make of the case, and he adjourned the hearing to December 27, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Judge Fowler assigned Attorney Charles DeLa Vergne to look after the boy's interests.

It was brought out that the boy has an aunt living in Long Island who is desirous of taking Lawrence and sending him to school and giving him the advantages that he could not obtain at home.

Whether Judge Fowler will place the boy in the custody of the aunt or sentence him to an institution will be decided at the close of the further investigation that is to be made in the case.

In the meantime Lawrence is still being held in custody.

Would Withdraw $500,000 Suit Against Tunney

Former Champion Says Action Was Brought Merely to Defame Him and Demands Judgment on His Cross Complaint.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 21 (AP).—The $500,000 breach of promise suit brought by Mrs. Katherine King Fogarty against James J. (Gene) Tunney, who made a million in the business of boxing and renounced his throne as king of the heavyweights, seemed today to be on the verge of ending shortly.

Frank L. Wilder, Mrs. Fogarty's counsel, announced yesterday, after he had been granted permission to quit the case as her representative, that the attractive divorcee of Fort Worth, Texas, and New York city, had dispatched a letter authorizing a withdrawal of the action which was brought in Superior Court last May.

The defendant, however, wants a different settlement. Gene's attorney, Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, immediately filed a motion for judgment on his cross complaint, which, among other things, alleges that the suit was brought merely to defame him and to extort money. The motion will be argued next Friday before Judge Carl Foster.

Mrs. Fogarty's letter, according to Wilder, was written in Boston and was dated November 4.

At the present time Tunney is living in Greenwich with his wife, the former Polly Lauder, whom he married abroad before the breach of promise suit was filed.

In court yesterday, Wilder was scheduled to argue his demurrer that Tunney had sufficient defense at law without his additional allegations in the cross-complaint. After he was overruled he asked the court's permission to withdraw from the case.

Cummings then moved for judgment on the cross complaint and said: "We will not agree to a withdrawal of the action. We want a judgment in this case and hope to get it next Friday."

Another legal matter, the suit for $500,000 brought against the former boxer by John H. Fogarty, one-time Fort Worth plumber, who charged that Gene's promise to wed his wife influenced her to obtain a divorce from him remains not acted upon.

Mrs. Fogarty accused the man who twice defeated Jack Dempsey of proposing to her in Hot Springs, Ark., June 3, 1925. She accepted, she said, but she found later that he had a change of heart.

Tunney was in Italy when the suit was filed but he answered through counsel, denying everything. He also charged that the woman had twice been "bought off" when she threatened to sue him on the eve of the biggest happening in his life as a clerk, marine and fighter—his battles with Dempsey.

Search for Clue 700 In Peril When Car Float Rams Ferry West Point

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP).—Faced with a mystery, as baffling as that of a ship's disappearance at sea, the War Department searched today for any clue that might explain the crash of the giant Fokker monoplane that yesterday carried a member of Congress and four companions to death as they started home for Christmas.

The views of every person at the army airport at Bolling Field who had any knowledge of the accident were sought by the investigating board, but so far none has been able to tell what made the craft, powered with three sturdy motors, falter and plunge to the earth.

As the inquiry proceeded, a congressional committee appointed shortly after the accident arranged to attend the funeral services for Representative William Kirk Kaynor, who was killed when starting for Springfield, Mass., to inspect a National Guard unit and be with his wife and six children for the hanging of stockings on Christmas Eve.

Those killed with him were Captain Harry A. Dinger, a veteran pilot, who had more than 650 hours in the air in tri-motored ships; Stanley B. Lowe, the congressman's secretary; Arthur A. McGill, who was associated with the Republican national committee; and Charles (Vladimir) Kuzma, the mechanic.

While the bereaved families prepared for a saddened Christmas, Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, a World War aviator and president of the National Aeronautic Association, made a personal inquiry and called on the nation not to be discouraged over aviation.

The opinion prevailed that the explanation of the tragedy's cause may have perished with the pilot. A report by the board of inquiry is expected to be complete for announcement just before or after Christmas.

F. Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aeronautics, for whose use the plane had been set aside, conducted a personal investigation and sent messages of sympathy to the relatives of the men who were killed.

That the giant monoplane had started to twist in its earthward dive was established from the wreckage. The right motor was buried several feet into the ground, the central engine was flush with the earth, while the left motor appeared to have been cast upward.

Senator Bingham, after his personal inquiry, said: "I regard the plane as the safest ever built. The pilot was one of the best in the service. Those who saw the take-off said it was normal. Yet suddenly, without motor or structural failure, the machine went into a nose dive."

The Fokker plane is constructed to guard against spin, but the machine had only reached an altitude of 300 feet and there was not room enough for it to right itself.

"They were climbing and it was very dusty. It might be that something happened to the pilot—that he went into a faint. It might be that an unusual gust of wind struck the nose of the plane."

4 Major Pieces Of Legislation Already Enacted

Tax Reduction, Hospitalization, French Debt Settlement and Radio Commission Bills Made Laws Before Congress Adjourns for Christmas Recess.

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP).—Well advanced with its program in the first three weeks of the regular session, Congress turned happily today to the Christmas recess and two weeks of rest.

The pre-Christmas record shows four major pieces of legislation already enacted into law—the $160,000,000 tax reduction resolution, the $18,000,000 hospitalization bill, the measure ratifying the French war debt settlement and the bill extending indefinitely the life of the Radio Commission.

Satisfied with the accomplishment, only a handful of members remained on duty today to go through the formalities of quitting for the recess. It is the first real vacation for the Senate, which is still in the throes of the tariff debate it began last September, and no hope of getting a quorum in that chamber was entertained by leaders.

Giving in to the Yuletide spirit, investigations, hearings and meetings of all kinds were abandoned until the end of the recess on January 6. Then the Senate resumes the tariff struggle with the pledge of all factional leaders to sidetrack everything until a tariff measure finally is acted upon.

In addition to the legislation sent to President Hoover, congressional leaders pointed to another mass of problems disposed of in the Senate and House.

The Senate has finally settled the three-year-old claim of William S. Vare of Pennsylvania, to a seat, barring him for expenditures of $785,000 in his primary, and refusing the 1926 election to his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson. It has seated Joseph R. Grundy as successor but has yet to dispose of a contest against him.

The Senate acted upon a record number of nominations; adopted the resolution of Senator Jones, Republican, Washington, authorizing the joint congressional committee requested by President Hoover to study methods of reorganizing the prohibition service; and received some additional reports from the Lobby Committee on its extensive investigation.

The busy House also has a score. It has sent over to the Senate the $230,000,000 public buildings measure, passed the Interior Department Appropriation bill, and started the drafting of a $7,000,000 prison reorganization and construction program.

All in all, leaders were obviously satisfied with this record today and some declared it to exceed in accomplishments any previous pre-Christmas meeting of Congress.

Adventure Had No More "Kick"

Howard Smith, 18, Who Wanted to Go Down to the Sea in Ships, Picked Up Here and Jailed—His Story to be Investigated.

"When do you serve breakfast here?" asked Howard Smith, 18, of New London, Conn., as he was brought into police headquarters from the detention room this morning. He rubbed his eyes sleepily as he spoke. Howard had been picked up during the early morning hours on Railroad avenue on a charge of disorderly conduct in having no visible means of support.

Howard, later in police court, informed Judge Shufeldt in reply to questions that his mother and father were dead. He said he had been living with an uncle and aunt at New London and that he had a steady job there. He further stated he had a little trouble with his aunt and had left home and had gone to New York city.

"I always wanted to go to sea," said Howard, "but I could not find a ship." From New York he had wandered from place to place. He said he had not had a permanent job in three weeks.

According to Howard he used to get a "kick" out of a new job, but adventure no longer held a "kick" for him.

Judge Shufeldt sentenced Howard to twenty days in the county jail, and in the meantime the police will investigate his story and try to get in touch with his people.

Brogan Was Homeless.
William Brogan, who said he had no home, was given a temporary home for ten days in the county jail. He had been arrested for public intoxication at the West Shore railroad station.

Minority Leader Warns President

Says Hoover Should Make Positive Statement Regarding Intentions of Connection With Cuban Sugar Interests.

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP).—President Hoover was confronted today with a warning from the minority leader of the House that, in the absence of any word from the White House, undue importance may be attached to testimony before the Caraway lobby committee tending to link the chief executive with the activities of those opposing a high tariff on Cuban sugar.

The President has been disposed to ignore statements made before the Caraway group early this week to the effect that he instructed his secretary, Walter Newton, to establish a contact between the House ways and means committee and the Cuban sugar interests. There have been indications that such an attitude would be continued and that no statement might be expected from the chief executive.

Representative Garner, the Democratic leader, asserted that unless Mr. Hoover makes a "direct, definite and positive declaration," a great many people "will accept the evidence as proving that the President of the United States has been participating in the secret conspiracy against the interests of his own countrymen engaged in the sugar industry."

The President, he said, in justice to his office owes the country a direct pronouncement on this subject.

Referring to statements made in letters which were introduced as evidence, as well as that given orally, Garner asserted that "if the President, either personally, or through his secretary, Walter Newton, did not say the things and do the things mentioned in these letters, some method should be found to punish the men who assumed to speak by his authority and who reported to the head of a foreign government that our President had committed himself to aid their plans."

Objects to Report Of Col. Chandler

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—William D. Cox, secretary of the National Society for Penal Information, issued a statement today on the report of Colonel George F. Chandler regarding conditions at Auburn prison, in which Cox asked how it was possible for an investigation of this nature to be made in only forty-eight hours.

"How can sensible recommendations involving the whole question of prison administration be made on the basis of such an investigation when prison experts have given their whole life-time of study to the subjects?" Cox asked.

Referring to Colonel Chandler's report that the Mutual Welfare League, an organization of the prisoners, was responsible for both riots at Auburn, Cox said that if this was true it was a reflection on the county officials, since they had made no preparations of league officials. The prison is located in that county.

Cox said it was obvious that "many of the opinions given by Colonel Chandler are taken directly from statements by disgruntled and disloyal guards and that the biased opinions of these men are accepted by him as facts."

He scored the governor's investigation for making no reference to the "reign of terror" the society alleged was instigated by the authorities in control of the prison following the outbreak. Cox charged that personal property, keepsakes, papers and other private property of the prisoners was "wantonly destroyed."

WAS PRESIDENT OF FRANCE DURING STRENUOUS TIMES

Montellier, France, Dec. 21 (AP).—Official France today mourned Emile Loubet, former president, who died last night at the age of 91.

M. Loubet spent most of his latter days sitting at a stove in the village store here, smoking a pipe and discussing current events in a detached manner with peasants hereabout. His boyhood ambition was to become a farmer.

He died not because of any special disease, but because, as his physician said, "His light was just extinguished by old age." He was conscious to the last through hours of agony preceding his demise.

In the seven years of his presidency, from 1899 to 1906, M. Loubet coped with such fierce outcroppings of racial and religious feeling as the Dreyfus affair, the expulsion of the religious congregations, the Grande Chartreuse scandal, violent strikes, and the rupture with the Vatican.

General Hudson Sends Men and Trucks Upstate

After continuous emergency work for three days to restore electric service in the Saratoga district where the recent storm crippled the wires with heavy burdens of ice and sleet, the New York Power & Light Corporation Friday night requested assistance from their neighboring company, the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation. At 2:30 this morning, five trucks completely equipped with the necessary emergency apparatus and manned with a force of 55 linemen and foremen were dispatched from various district offices of the Central Hudson Company to replace emergency crews of the New York Power & Light Corporation which have become exhausted by their long continued efforts to overcome the results of this disastrous storm.

The Central Hudson crews have taken up the work of restoration in the area from Malone south to the Mohawk valley, including Glens Falls, Saratoga, Ballston, Ft. Edward, Greenwich and Schuylerville, and these crews will remain in the stricken area until service has been restored.

The storm which caused so much havoc in the northern part of the state did practically no damage to electric service in the Central Hudson Region except in the Catskill District where only slight interruptions to service were occasioned.

Farming in New York State

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 21 (AP).—Inoculation of the soil in which peas, beans and other legumes are to be grown with the proper bacteria is essential to success in many parts of New York state, according to experts at the Geneva State Agricultural Experiment Station.

These experts have completed an intensive survey of the legume inoculants which are offered for sale in this state and they reported that their tests showed a wide difference in the inoculants. This was so pronounced that they expressed the belief that the state should exercise the same sort of supervision over the sale of such inoculants that it does over seeds and fertilizers. In order to protect farmers from worthless cultures.

"In view of the fact that all legumes are benefited by the addition of the proper bacteria of the soil," they pointed out, "while in many instances inoculation is essential to success, the use of legume cultures by the farmers of the state has become quite general."

Dr. J. H. Conn, soil bacteriologist at the station, declared that the commercial inoculants now on the market "are either samples of soil presumably inoculated with the desired organisms or cultures of the legume bacteria growing on an agar medium in small bottles."

"Summing up the brief examination of commercial cultures recently made, it can be definitely stated that nine of the agar preparations were evidently worthless, the other 12 apparently satisfactory. Uniformly satisfactory cultures were not obtained from the soil preparations examined, but three or four were apparently satisfactory, while the remaining five or six contained so many foreign bacteria that their real value could not be judged by a laboratory test alone."

Station authorities asserted that farmers would find it more economical and satisfactory to obtain the soil cultures put out by the state college of agriculture at Ithaca, "as these cultures are known to be pure, are sold at cost, and pass through fewer hands before reaching the consumer."

Fruit growers of New York state will be given an opportunity to see the results of wise orchard management in a demonstration of the results of fertilizer and cultural tests in western New York apple orchards, to be given at the annual meeting of the New York State Horticultural Society in Rochester, January 15 to 17, by the Geneva State Agricultural Experiment Station and the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University.

The exhibits will stress the effect of soil moisture on yield, how clean cultivation and cropping the orchard to alfalfa, red clover or grass affects the soil moisture and hence the yield, the effects of orchard management on the nitrates in the soil; how clean cultivation and cropping to alfalfa, red clover or grass affects soil nitrates, and the fact that high nitrates in soils make apples.

ENGLISH PRISONERS GIVEN NO TOBACCO

LONDON (AP).—Edgar Wallace, the writer of mystery thrillers, got one of the biggest surprises of his life when he visited Sing Sing prison in New York and saw convicts smoking cigars.

"Convicts and wardens in a great American prison are just boys together," he told the ships news reporters on his return here. "The prisoners come out in the exercise yard smoking cigars and doing much as they like."

To an Englishman who knows his prisons this is indeed a surprising confirmation of the tales told of "coddling" convicts in America. For in England a judge takes away more than a man's liberty when he sentences him to prison—he takes away his cigarettes, his cigars, his pipe and his chewing tobacco.

Tobacco is smoked and chewed in English prisons nevertheless, but most of it is smuggled in. Only long-term convicts who have won the privilege by good behavior over a period of years are permitted to have tobacco.

The others get it somehow if they can and treasure it so highly that a pinch of plug tobacco is as good as money; better, in fact, for money is not worth much to a prisoner until it can be converted into tobacco. Even if he does not use the weed himself, he tries to get it, for tobacco is the currency of the convict community.

When cards are played for high stakes in an English prison the stakes are bits of tobacco.

Atheism Wanes As Religious Strife Ceases In Portugal

LISBON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Religious strife, which divided the nation into two camps when the republic was young and resulted in the closing of many churches on the crest of a wave of atheism, has subsided with the conclusion of peace between church and government.

Separation of the church and state when the monarchy was overthrown in 1910, dispossessed the former of an influence which had progressed so far that polling places for the elections to the national legislature were placed in the churches. From this there ensued a reaction which swung the pendulum to the other extreme but now that movement has itself reacted.

It is declared that church attendance under the republic is greater than it was prior to the revolution. In addition there is a widespread spirit of tolerance toward all religions.

One of the bodies that benefited from the changed relations was the Jews. The census of 1900 noted only 481 of that faith in the entire kingdom but that many more had concealed their religion because of the attitude of officials was demonstrated as soon as the restrictions were removed.

Talmud Torahs were organized, synagogues which had fallen into decay from disuse were reopened, Saturday again became a day of rest and kosher butcher shops were started in several cities.

Official expulsion of Jews from Spain and Portugal had resulted in formal anathemas being pronounced against both countries by a synod of orthodox rabbis. That has not yet been revoked so no grand rabbi has been chosen for Portugal. Instead the Jews of this country are under the spiritual leadership of the Grand Rabbi of Morocco.

Evidence of the newly acquired religious freedom was seen however in the fact that Portuguese Jews sent a delegate to a recent Zionist congress at Zurich. Also when refugees from Palestine riots arrived here recently, they were received openly by

MR. HOOVER'S GOOD SENSE.

The President's admirably commonsensical treatment of the notorious "Communist" who paraded before the White House in striking and refreshing contrast with the ponderous seriousness of provincial judges in Ohio who seem to think that this republic will be destroyed unless they force foreign-born women seeking naturalization to swear that they will bear arms in this country's wars and "fight to kill". Although the banners of the parading youths applauded Haitian resistance to the American forces of occupation, foolishly denounced the Hoover business conferences "as treachery against the working classes" and absurdly revived the Briand-Kellogg pact renouncing war as a scheme of Wall Street, Mr. Hoover wisely advised the police to release the "misguided youths" and send them home to their parents, his statement concluding: "The President does not believe that any such disloyalty seriously endangers the republic, and believes that a night in jail is only doing them a favor of cheap martyrdom."

Of course Mr. Hoover's recommendation was acted on, and the protesting, disappointed, crestfallen youngsters, robbed of their opportunity to get publicity, were dismissed into obscurity with the feelings of misbehaving boys who had been spanked and sent to bed. Mr. Hoover has been critically accused of an inclination toward things English, but he does well to admire and adopt the effective British method of dealing with soap-box agitators. Revolutionary agitators are allowed to air their views by the hour in sections of the London parks, with the result that only idlers pay any attention to them and they are unable to complain of being gagged or persecuted.

A RABBI ON RUSSELL'S VIEW.

At a recent memorial dinner in Philadelphia Rabbi Fineschreiber paid his respects to Bertrand Russell, the English publicist, who in Philadelphia in a recent public utterance urged marital infidelity as the safety-valve of wedlock, arguing that "a few outside sexual adventures" for both husband and wife will banish restlessness from the fireside, make for domestic peace, remove the menace of divorce, and preserve the home for the children—all this notwithstanding the fact that from time out of mind marital infidelity has been the chief cause for seeking and for granting divorce.

Apart from his inevitable denunciation of Bertrand Russell's theory—which would cause the whole of civilization to "go down into the abyss and never emerge again"—Rabbi Fineschreiber pointedly observed that he would prefer to see more divorces than a condoning of marital infidelity and "loss of the central reverence for marriage," which institution at its best is "a marriage of minds and souls" as well as a physical union—a "marvelous and beautiful, bringing together of two human beings to create a family." The earnest young Rabbi deplored "the lack of proper information given children on the matter of sex," leaving them to get it from impure sources "furtively," and said: "Unless we reconstruct the whole system of education we will reap the whirlwind. There must be a sympathetic cooperation with the younger generation and an inculcation of the proper attitudes of reverence toward marriage and sex relations. This instruction cannot be started too soon."

POE IN PARIS.

There has long been speculation as to whether the "father of the short story" and the great pioneer in analytical detective fiction, Edgar Allan Poe, ever visited Paris, the scene of some of his best known detective tales, including "The Purloined Letter" and "The Murders in the Rue Morgue." And now documentary evidence has been found that he did visit Paris in 1832 in his twenty-third year, with no more than 26 francs to support him while there. The evidence is contained in a manuscript recently discovered in Italy, in which the famous Alexander Dumas, author, gives an account of Poe's visit, discusses his eccentricities and refers to his remarkable "power of divination." Following are brief extracts from a published copy of the Dumas manuscript:

One day a young American presented himself at my house with an introduction from his fellow countryman, the famous novelist, Fenimore Cooper. Needless to say I welcomed him with open arms. His name was Edgar Poe. From the outset I realized that I had to deal with a remarkable man. Poe had one serious infirmity; he liked the light better than the day. Indeed his love of darkness amounted to a passion. As soon as the day began to break he turned up the windows of his room and lit a couple of candles, in which he continued to be worked, or read, or indulged in reverie. In our occasional talks I could not help remarking with wonder and admiration (though his rich endowment of ideas could have prepared me for the extraordinary faculty of analysis exhibited by my friend.

According to Detroit dispatches, Henry B. Joy, a prominent financier and philanthropist, a member in the Republican party of Michigan, not only asks "the forgiveness of the public" for having been "debauched" into voting for the prohibition law, but has resigned from the Detroit Republican Club because of his party's "political hypocrisy" in connection with prohibition. Doubtless he has been reminded, however, that such "hypocrisy" is not altogether confined to the Republican ranks. Mr. Joy also complains of "the killing of innocent citizens by enforcement agents" and asserts: "I have known governors of states who preach prohibition with long faces and who are not averse to indulging in alcoholic beverages. I have known a United States District Judge who sent men to prison for long terms and inflicted heavy fines for violations, and who was not averse to refreshing himself with alcoholic beverages."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

BY
 James W. Barton, M. D.

SUN AND CLOTHING.

During the warm weather the newspapers carried items about a man who created considerable amusement by wearing his pajamas on the streets of a large city, and he was not molested. In his home town in the south he was arrested for doing this same thing.

It is incidents like this that bring forcibly to the mind the fact that man does everything to shut out sunshine and its benefits.

It is for this reason the use of lamps to give artificial sunlight is now popular in hospitals and homes. Beginning with about one minute on each side of the body, the exposure is gradually increased to a half hour. In addition to this cows are now given artificial sunlight to enrich milk. And even foods are irradiated, as giving these sun rays is called.

Now what this means is that man is just beginning to realize what the sun was meant to do for him; to give him, together with fresh air, the maximum amount of health.

Living in a temperate zone, as most of us do, it is of course impossible for us to go about without clothing.

But what about the bright days with shining sun?

Unfortunately we feel it necessary to cover the entire body during hot and cold weather, and thus shut out these health giving rays.

Unfortunately also in most cities there is so much smoke and in others so much fog that much of these ultra-violet rays are obstructed and fail to reach us.

Our women folk are using sense in the matter of clothing; little children are using "sun suits," but men still cling to the type of clothing that shuts off most of the beneficial rays of the sun.

Now I don't expect to have any influence in changing the style of men's clothing. That is dictated by fashion and usage. However, if we could all get the idea that our bodies were meant to have the sunlight even in the temperate zone, then we would all take our own methods of securing it. Some would wear clothing whose texture permits the rays to enter; some would get outdoors as much as possible and permit a portion of the body to be exposed from time to time to the sun's rays; and others with sufficient money would purchase the arc and ultra-violet lamps which give off the ultra violet rays.

The Secret of Mohawk Pond

CHAPTER I
 A CLOUD LIFTS

THE tall form of the sheriff was standing on the veranda when Peggy answered the knock.

"Hello. Come in and sit down," Peggy invited the sheriff to the most comfortable chair in the room and placed before him her uncle's choicest cigars. She sat down close at hand.

"How come you are alone?" Beach asked. "It's getting kind of late, most six. Aren't you uneasy, staying by yourself?"

"Julia went for the mail," Peggy paused and looked around; where was Julia? She should have returned at least a half hour before. "It is not so lonesome as you think," she added. "Mr. Evans comes over often, and Jim, her purse was intentional—his son."

Beach looked puzzled for an instant.

"His son," he repeated; then, with dawning intelligence: "Oh, you mean Obadiah's stepson, Jim Sinclair?"

Peggy sat very still. Her heart was pounding against her ribs and she felt half suffocated. So that was it! Behind her quiet eyes regarding the sheriff so steadily, her thoughts were in a turmoil.

So Jim was, in reality, the man she had come to regard with such bitterness. The end, to deceive her so! But even as her blood reached the boiling stage, she was fair enough to admit that perhaps it was a case of self-deception; she had accepted Jim as Obadiah's son and no one had corrected that impression. Put was it honorable not to have told her? Perhaps Jim kept quiet to save her embarrassment.

"Mrs. Sinclair was from around these parts," went on Sheriff Beach, reminiscently. "And when she was left a widow with two small children, she came back to the old farm. Obadiah and she had been boy and girl sweethearts till she went off to live with some rich relations down to New York."

"By and by she married Obadiah, but only lived 'bout five years. Obadiah wanted to adopt both children, but the New York cousins took the little girl."

Beach wagged his head reflectively.

"Obadiah gave Jim a wonderful schooling; he sacrificed 'most everything for that boy."

As he rambled on, Peggy struggled to readjust her viewpoint. Jim was Jim to her, his parentage of no moment. If the wealth which she had hoped to share with him was to have been his by the provision in her uncle's will in case she did not fulfill the stipulations therein, why was she the more deeply glad. Generous to a fault, Peggy's heart rejoiced.

"About that gun?"

Beach spoke more briskly as he reached the object of his call.

"Here 'tis. I removed the cartridges for safe handling," and handed an automatic pistol to Peggy.

Peggy missed the sheriff's kindly meant, if tactless, sarcasm and the faint twinkle in his eyes, her attention being entirely centered on the weapon in her hand. It was identically like her uncle's, but the working on it read, "Model 1911—U. S. navy."

She caught her breath, then smiled; of course, it would have "U. S. navy" stamped upon it—did it not belong to Jim and he was in the navy; at least, she had found the gun she had used that fateful night in Jim's pocket—presumably he had picked it up by mistake for him. She must tell the sheriff the comedy of errors and give him the weapon with which she shot Edgar Stanton.

"This is a .35 caliber pistol," she said, noting the further wording on the automatic, and she put out her hand to open the table drawer where she had put her uncle's pistol: "while—"

"Sure," broke in Sheriff Beach, mistaking the cause of her hesitancy. "And the bullet found in Stanton's heart was of .35 caliber. His eyes traveled upward to the top of the stairs and down to the spot where Stanton's body had lain. 'You are a darn good shot, Miss Prescott!'"

Peggy heard not a word that he said after his first sentence. Her extended hand dropped to her side. Twice she strove to speak before she found her voice.

"How come you are alone?" Beach asked. "It's getting kind of late, most six. Aren't you uneasy, staying by yourself?"

"Julia went for the mail," Peggy paused and looked around; where was Julia? She should have returned at least a half hour before. "It is not so lonesome as you think," she added. "Mr. Evans comes over often, and Jim, her purse was intentional—his son."

"About that gun?"

Beach spoke more briskly as he reached the object of his call.

"Here 'tis. I removed the cartridges for safe handling," and handed an automatic pistol to Peggy.

Peggy missed the sheriff's kindly meant, if tactless, sarcasm and the faint twinkle in his eyes, her attention being entirely centered on the weapon in her hand. It was identically like her uncle's, but the working on it read, "Model 1911—U. S. navy."

She caught her breath, then smiled; of course, it would have "U. S. navy" stamped upon it—did it not belong to Jim and he was in the navy; at least, she had found the gun she had used that fateful night in Jim's pocket—presumably he had picked it up by mistake for him. She must tell the sheriff the comedy of errors and give him the weapon with which she shot Edgar Stanton.

"This is a .35 caliber pistol," she said, noting the further wording on the automatic, and she put out her hand to open the table drawer where she had put her uncle's pistol: "while—"

"Sure," broke in Sheriff Beach, mistaking the cause of her hesitancy. "And the bullet found in Stanton's heart was of .35 caliber. His eyes traveled upward to the top of the stairs and down to the spot where Stanton's body had lain. 'You are a darn good shot, Miss Prescott!'"

Peggy heard not a word that he said after his first sentence. Her extended hand dropped to her side. Twice she strove to speak before she found her voice.

"How come you are alone?" Beach asked. "It's getting kind of late, most six. Aren't you uneasy, staying by yourself?"

"Julia went for the mail," Peggy paused and looked around; where was Julia? She should have returned at least a half hour before. "It is not so lonesome as you think," she added. "Mr. Evans comes over often, and Jim, her purse was intentional—his son."

Beach looked puzzled for an instant.

"His son," he repeated; then, with dawning intelligence: "Oh, you mean Obadiah's stepson, Jim Sinclair?"

Peggy sat very still. Her heart was pounding against her ribs and she felt half suffocated. So that was it! Behind her quiet eyes regarding the sheriff so steadily, her thoughts were in a turmoil.

So Jim was, in reality, the man she had come to regard with such bitterness. The end, to deceive her so! But even as her blood reached the boiling stage, she was fair enough to admit that perhaps it was a case of self-deception; she had accepted Jim as Obadiah's son and no one had corrected that impression. Put was it honorable not to have told her? Perhaps Jim kept quiet to save her embarrassment.

"Mrs. Sinclair was from around these parts," went on Sheriff Beach, reminiscently. "And when she was left a widow with two small children, she came back to the old farm. Obadiah and she had been boy and girl sweethearts till she went off to live with some rich relations down to New York."

"By and by she married Obadiah, but only lived 'bout five years. Obadiah wanted to adopt both children, but the New York cousins took the little girl."

Beach wagged his head reflectively.

"Obadiah gave Jim a wonderful schooling; he sacrificed 'most everything for that boy."

As he rambled on, Peggy struggled to readjust her viewpoint. Jim was Jim to her, his parentage of no moment. If the wealth which she had hoped to share with him was to have been his by the provision in her uncle's will in case she did not fulfill the stipulations therein, why was she the more deeply glad. Generous to a fault, Peggy's heart rejoiced.

LUTHERAN CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER PAGEANT.

The Sunday school of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, assisted by the Junior Choir will present a Christmas pageant, "The Holy Night." Sunday evening. It is a pageant constructed along the lines of those used in the medieval church, from which the modern drama took its rise. It is to be presented in the church building. The pageant purposes to tell the story of the birth of the Saviour through song and action. It celebrates the promises of God concerning the Redeemer, the vision of the angels, the following of the star, and the shepherd's of the wise men and the shepherd at the manger, with appropriate hymns. The worshippers are led to Bethlehem itself, and join in the adoration of the infant Saviour. The presentation is churchly and devotional.

The characters are as follows: Mary, Doris Nickerson; Joseph, Harry Miller; the shepherds, John Houghtaling, Kenneth Deyo, Walter Hutt; the wise men, Richard Bailey, Jr., Fred Spalt, Jr., Kenneth Cudney; the prophet, George Hutt; the seraph, Katherine Bailey; the cherubs, Ethel Stork, Olive Saeffhoff, Faith McCullen, Harriet Rice, Mattilda Smith, Sara Richens, Jane Rice, Marian Hotelling, Virginia Luedtke, Audrey Koch, Selma Schwartz, Shirley Dunham, Doris Purvis. The Junior Choir, which will comprise the children's choir in the pageant, is composed of Ruth Nickerson, Helen Curtis, Vivian Richards, Gertrude Kolts, Alma Dittus, Margaret Burton, Elsie McLean, Thelma Van Buren, Gladys Saeffhoff, Isabel Mohr, Anna Mier, Mildred Cudney, Caroline Hutter, Beatrice Lahl, Helen Rice, Mrs. William Miller and Mrs. George Schantz are directing the pageant with Prof. Richens in charge of the music.

Following the pageant the congregation will adjourn to the Bible school rooms where the beginners' department will render a brief program and where the gifts to the school will be distributed. As in former years each member of the school will bring a gift of food which will be distributed to needy families.

The Christmas dawn service at 6 a. m. will be the only service on Christmas day.

Church And School Notes

(By The Associated Press)
Albany, N. Y., Dec. 21 (P. M.)—Student preaching has been removed from the realm of purely "bread and butter" jobs at the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, and is now a part of the regular curriculum, regarded as laboratory and experience, according to the Rev. Dr. Albert V. Braven, president of the school.

Under the new plan, worked out under the direction of Professor Frederick W. Vichert, director of extra-mural work, the practice in preaching required of divinity students corresponds to the internship of medical students. The work done by students along these lines will be supervised by members of the faculty.

The student also will receive credits for his practical work, a practice which was frowned upon under the old system.

The revised curriculum provides a new basis for the awarding of scholarships. Cooperative scholarships will be awarded at the end of the first semester on the merits of supervised pastoral work, reports on which will be required from the students.

In the opinion of Dean Thomas Waring, the new arrangement has solved a problem which has long bothered the school authorities.

"Formerly," he said, "the attitude of the professor toward extra-mural work has been one of either resentment or toleration. At the best, it was considered a necessary evil, arising from the habitual poverty of divinity students, but under the new plan it has risen to be regarded as a highly valuable part of the student's training."

A bronze tablet in memory of Dr. Charles H. Ludlum has been placed in the new Ludlum Elementary School at Hempstead. Dr. Ludlum was a member of the Hempstead board of education for forty years.

Two new public schools are to be erected in Brooklyn, the New York city board of estimate having approved an appropriation of $849,500 for their construction.

Professor William Adams Brown of Union Theological Seminary is "not greatly disturbed when some of our contemporary humanists tell us that we have outgrown Jesus," he declared in a recent sermon.

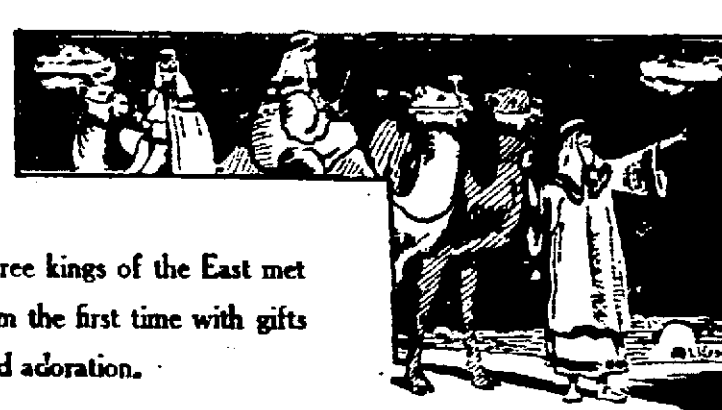

"If a man feels strong enough and wise enough to dispense with Jesus, by all means let him do so. My study has taught me not to accept opinions just because they are new. We hear a great many people telling us that modern scholarship has proved this or disproved that about Jesus. When people tell you this, do not be too quick to believe them, not at least until they tell you very clearly just what it is that modern scholarship has proved or disproved, and who it is that claims the right to speak in its name."

Appointment of Augustus H. Shearer, librarian of the Grosvenor Library, Buffalo, as a member of the library advisory council of the board of regents, to succeed Laure C. Foucher, Utica, has been announced.

London Rail Plan Dooms Old Shakespearean Stage

London's famous "Old Vic" theatre, noted as the house where all of Shakespeare's plays have been produced by Miss Lillian Baylis (inset), is to be torn down to make room for a new railway station.

London, Dec. 21 (P)—London's "Old Vic," famous as the theatre that staged all of Shakespeare's plays without going bankrupt, is soon to be torn down to make room for a railroad station. The London county council needed the site in connection with the new Charing Cross bridge and station. For years the old playhouse has been threatened from one quarter or another. Six years ago it was saved when the late Lord Oxford and the Archbishop of Canterbury interceded for it, and on another occasion Sir George Dance rescued it by providing $150,000 for necessary repairs.

MEXICO CLAIMS HIGH POSITION IN AVIATION

Mexico City (P)—The Department of Aeronautics announces that in proportion to population and territory, Mexico is excelled only by Germany in the mileage of its air mail and passenger routes.

The statistics reveal that on a comparative basis Mexico leads the United States in air development. The United States has in operation 22,593 miles of air lines serving a population of 120,000,000 and an area four times as large as Mexico while Mexico has 6,480 miles of air routes serving a population of 15,000,000.

Mexico's development in civil aviation has been amazing inasmuch as practically the entire network of lines has been put into operation since the Escobar revolution last March. Prior to that time only the Vera Cruz to Merida line, about 600 miles long, was in operation by a civil company, while government planes were flying only from Mexico City to Laredo, Tex.

The government line expired with the revolution but with the end of the revolt civil air lines sprang up throughout the republic.

Air lines now connect Mexico City with Brownsville, Tex., via Tampico in five hours; Mexico City with El Paso via Zacatecas, Torreon and Chihuahua in ten hours; Mexico City with Nogales via Guadalajara, Mazatlan, Guaymas and Hermosillo in less than two days; Brownsville with Mazatlan via Monterrey, Torreon and Durango in eight hours; Mexico City with Guatemala via Puebla, Oaxaca and Tapachula in eight hours; Vera Cruz with Guatemala via San Geronimo and Tapachula in six hours; Vera Cruz with Merida via Minatitlan and Villahermosa in six hours, and San Luis Potosi with Torreon and Guadalajara.

Shrines For War Dead. Paris (P)—President Domergue, Raymond Poincare and other leaders are backing a movement to raise $200,000 to complete the work of building immense shrines for entombment of 100,000 unidentified war dead whose bones lie in scattered graves.

Whole-sale Massacre. Professor Constanti recently, to a gathering of scientists in Rome, said that he had discovered the grotto, in the province of Termini, in which the Romans (303 B. C.) slew 2,000 bandits, who had taken refuge there. This wholesale massacre is recorded by Livy.

TELLS FRENCHMEN THEY MISUNDERSTAND AMERICA

Paris, Dec. 21 (P)—"America against Americanism" is the title of an article by Pierre Lyautey, a nephew of France's famous marshal, who has just returned from a visit to the Eastern States.

M. Lyautey regrets the false impression of the United States which exists in France. Here "Americanism" is a synonym for feverish haste, extravagance in recreation, money-pride, women with the gait of men, and unbridled youth in motor cars ### tearing along the highways of a land plastered with advertising.

He warns his countrymen against this false conception of a great country, and tells with a surprise he is unable to hide of the quiet home life he found across the Atlantic.

Rockefellers Aid Germans.

Goettingen, Germany, Dec. 21 (P)—The Rockefeller Foundation has helped Goettingen University reinforce its position as "center of the mathematical world" by donating funds for a new home for the Institute of Mathematics.

Healthful Kidneys A Winter Necessity

The kidneys assist in the control of the action of the skin and of the best regulation of the body. During the season of the year when there are quick changes from the warmth of day to the chill of night, or when the body must adapt itself to a change from the extreme of outdoor cold to indoor comfort, the kidney sufferer is in constant danger.

Kidney weakness, and inefficiency in adapting the body to sudden atmospheric changes, is apt to cause congestion somewhere within the body. In other words, congestion occurs when something prevents the blood from having an equal and normal circulation within the body. These congestions may be acute or chronic in nature and so serious that death may result. Hence, if you present symptoms of kidney disturbance, you should give yourself immediate attention by arranging for a Chiropactic examination. By having your kidneys made normal by Chiropactic, better health for you will follow.

Chiropactic today may save regrets tomorrow.

J. L. MacKINNON.

BACKACHE AND KIDNEY TROUBLE IS NOW GONE

"Before taking Chiropactic treatment, I was bothered with my back and kidneys so badly that I could not sleep after two in the morning. Now I sleep all night, and my health is sound and vigorous once more."—Marion Morgan, Chiropactic Research Bureau Statement, No. 1237-H.

Our success is due to our policy of never accepting cases that we cannot benefit.

In addition to the training received at the world's most prominent Chiropactic universities, supplemented by fifteen years' actual practice and observation, we have originated and are using our own system of point-of-treatment which is a distinct advance over methods commonly in use.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—The stock market staged a brisk recovery today after an early period of irregularity. Extreme gains in a long list of active issues ranged from one to 16 points, with only a few spots dropping out here despite belated tax selling and liquidation of weakened speculative accounts. Trading was fairly heavy.

There was nothing in the day's news to account for the sudden change of speculative sentiment, leading to the belief that the market had been oversold, at least temporarily. Bear traders, apparently unable to disclose any large volume of stock, rushed to cover as floor traders bought stocks heavily for a time.

Brisk recoveries in Fox Film and International Combustion suggested the existence of a tremendous short interest in those issues. Fox Film rallied more than 4 points from Friday's low while Combustion, preferred, which touched a new low of 18 1/2 on Thursday, jumped 7 1/2 points to 24 1/2.

Safeway Stores, Simmons Company, United States Industrial Alcohol, General Electric and Union Carbide all rallied 5 points or more. United States Steel Common, Anaconda Copper, Dupont, Public Service of New Jersey and Glucose Safety Razor were among the many issues to show gains of 2 points or more. The closing was strong. Sales approximated 1,750,000 shares.

FLATBUSH

Flatbush, Dec. 21.—The regular weekly prayer meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Howard Osterhout on Thursday evening. The Sunday School of the Reformed Church will give their Christmas program on Sunday, December 22, at 7:30 o'clock. A delightful program has been arranged by Miss Florence Demmler and all are cordially invited to come.

One of the Flatbush boys had the misfortune to slide into the ditch but no one was hurt. After being helped out of the ditch the boy proceeded on his way to Sangerites.

The North Flatbush School gave their Christmas entertainment Friday and the school closed for the holidays.

Several from here attended the Lake Katrine Grange Christmas meeting on Monday evening.

Where Notables Gambled
In the Home and Groom tavern, Streatham, London, is the direct ancestor to the famous old inn of the same name where the Prince Regent, afterward King George IV, used to frequent on nights with his companions. In the spacious grounds at the rear, was a cockpit, where, on occasion, according to local tradition, was fought a duel between two owners of the place and others belonging to Colonel Mordaunt and Doctor Mordaunt, the station being one hundred yards for each of the seven battles and five thousand guineas the stake. Doctor Johnson, too, was a frequent visitor to the old house.

Willard & Co. 50th Anniversary Face Injunction Of His First Mass Suit by State

Action against a banking house and a brokerage firm for alleged fraudulent practices resulted Friday in a court order restraining the Columbia Finance Corporation, with principal offices at 225 Seventh avenue, New York, from continuing its business on the grounds that small corporations already have lost $150,000 and in the arrest of two of the firm's officers who are charged with misappropriating $250,000 deposited by clients with the firm.

The brokerage firm involved is the W. E. Willard & Co., Inc., 25 West Forty-fourth street, which is made the defendant in an application for an injunction filed in Supreme Court to restrain them from disposing of $250,000 in securities, representing the life savings of Dr. John W. Pearson, a seventy-four-year-old physician of Philadelphia, N. Y., who charges he received stocks of little or nominal value in return for high grade securities. The application for a restraining order will be argued Tuesday.

W. E. Willard & Co. brokers have had a branch office in the Governor Clinton Hotel in this city for some time, dealing in investment securities.

World Slow to Reward Men of Musical Genius
Musical composition is one of the very worst paid jobs in the world unless the composer happens to hit the popular fancy of his own time, which only a few composers have managed to do. Consequently most of the composers have done something else for a living, though generally something connected with music. J. S. Bach was a church organist, Handel was an organist and conductor, Mozart was in his day a famous pianist, as were also Mendelssohn and Brahms. Spohr was a great violinist, Gounod and Franck, organists. Robert Schumann was only prevented from making his living as a pianist by his enthusiasm to obtain a perfect technique, while Beethoven and Schubert lived all their lives in comparative poverty because of their innate perversity and their lack of practicality in those matters which would have brought them a competency. Opera composers more frequently made a trade of composition, but even these have often been or orchestral players, or conductors, or have made a living by teaching and writing about music.

Smart Dogs Die Young
"Ten thousand white ones and sixty black ones! Go round 'em, Shep!" This command was supposed to have been given to a certain sheep dog in Montana, and presumably he thereupon rounded up the sheep and counted them. But the poor dog's dead now, brain fever, no doubt. It is strange that when anyone tells a tale of some extraordinary animal, be it dog, horse or cat, he usually adds as an afterthought, "He's dead now, poor fellow." In fact, some one with time to spare ought to make a study of the high mortality rate among canine and other animal wonders; and after satisfying himself on that point, he might turn to a closely allied topic, the regrettable longevity of cheerful larks.—From "Sheep," by Archer B. Gillilan.

World's Oldest Tune
The tune to which the popular ditty "For he's a jolly good fellow" is sung is said to be the oldest tune known to man. Its origin, says Looker-on in the London Daily Chronicle, is lost in antiquity. Research has brought to light that it was well known to the ancient Egyptians, and that they probably got it from Babylon, but beyond this the trail is lost. Visitors to Lapland have heard the melody there; it is known to the native tribes of South America, and it is frequently used by the aborigines of Australia, as well as by the Moors and Arabs. It came to England when the Crusaders returned from the Holy land, and it was used by some old-time warriors, as a sort of war song, when they were besieging Jerusalem.

Local Death Record
Alice, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sperl of Sangerites, died Friday at the Benedictine Hospital, aged eleven months. Besides the parents she is survived by one sister, Elizabeth, and two brothers, Arthur, Jr., and Albert. Funeral services Monday afternoon from the late home. Interment in Katsbaan cemetery.

The funeral of Justus W. Bower, brother of Mrs. John Tancredi of Albany avenue, this city, who died at Tonawanda on Tuesday, was held today from the Leo V. Grogan funeral parlors, Pearl street, and from St. Joseph's Church at 9 o'clock, where a Mass of requiem was said for the repose of his soul. Interment in the family plot in Willywick cemetery.

Jennie V. Brown of 34 Sycamore street died Thursday. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Katherine Nugent Brown, widow of William A. Brown. Funeral Monday at 9 a. m. from her late home and at 9:30 a. m. from St. Mary's Church, where a Mass of requiem will be offered for the repose of her soul. Interment in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Members of St. Mary's Rosary Society will meet at the late home, 34 Sycamore street, Sunday at 2:30 p. m. to recite the Rosary for the repose of her soul. They are requested to attend the funeral Mass in a body.

The funeral of Frank H. Grommeyer was held from his late home, No. 31 Brewster street yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock and at 2:30 p. m. from the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, where services were conducted by the Rev. E. L. Witte, pastor, who spoke in high terms of his faithful Christian character, his faithfulness to his church, family and friends. The services were very largely attended by his many relatives and friends and there was a profusion of beautiful floral tributes.

The bearers were members of the family and following the services Mrs. Herman Lee Tour sang "Nearer My God to Thee." The interment was in the family plot in Montrose cemetery, where the committal services were conducted by Pastor Witte.

PROF. MICHELSON REMAINS BECAUSE OF ILL HEALTH
Chicago, Dec. 21 (AP).—Professor Albert A. Michelson, world-famous physicist who observed his 77th birthday Thursday, has resigned as head of the physics department of the University of Chicago.

Saying he was forbidden by ill health to continue his official post at the university, the famous scientist asked to be relieved from duty at the end of the school year, in June, 1930.

Longevity Statistics
The average span of life in this country, or the expectation of life at birth, is 63.5 years for males and 65.5 for females. The United States life tables, compiled by the bureau of the census, show that of 70,000 persons reaching the age of forty, there will be 62,542 living to the age of sixty; in other words, about 74 per cent of those reaching forty will live to the age of sixty.

Autopsy Goes to Prove Curren's Story Correct

An autopsy performed by Dr. George W. Ross and Dr. Joseph Jacobson upon the body of Grover C. Light, who was shot at his home in West Park Thursday evening by his brother-in-law, Ralph Curren, disclosed the fact that death had been caused by hemorrhage and shock. The shots from the gun had taken a downward course in the left leg, indicating that Curren's statement that he aimed the gun down at Light's feet was correct. Curren is being held in the jail pending a complete investigation.

He alleges he shot his brother-in-law when he believed he was about to inflict serious injury upon Mrs. Light, whom it is alleged had been threatened by Light. Both attempted to secure possession of the gun and Curren secured it first and fired at Light. It is reported that on prior occasion there had been trouble when Light drank too much. On a previous day he and his brother-in-law wrestled for possession of a gun and Curren succeeded in getting possession, although Light was the larger man.

Funeral services will be from the home and will be private. Interment in Highland cemetery. Arrangements were being made to arraign Curren before Justice H. E. McKennie at Port Ewen today on a technical charge of manslaughter in the first degree, although it is shown that he acted in defense of his sister when he believed she was in danger of serious injury. It is not probable that he will ever face a charge of manslaughter. The investigation thus far indicates that he was acting in her defense at the time of the shooting and that had he not procured the gun before Light there might have been a more serious affair.

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

Black and White is An Unusual Arrangement.

New York.—The separate waist and skirt, tucked or otherwise, has of course inspired designers to produce this effect in one-piece models. The result has been a number of good looking, if unusual dresses, the bodice and skirt of which are in strong contrast.

No better example of a costume of this kind can be cited than the one shown in which black and white are used in a somewhat copy turvy manner. So grotesque is it we go to think of the blouse section of a frock as being lighter than the skirt that a reverse arrangement is bound to be arresting.

What could be done to break Jack loose? As things were now he would never be a man. How she would love to tell the old man what she thought of him! As the idea flashed through her mind her lips straightened out into a grim little line of determination.

The next morning at breakfast her family noticed that she seemed to be preoccupied, and just a little excited. "I'm going uptown," she told her mother, after breakfast.

"What for, dear?" "Oh, it's a secret mission—some reform work," she answered lightly. A moment later she was deftly backing the little green car out of the garage and planning her campaign. As she stopped in front of the tall office building her courage almost failed her.

"Mr. Stamford," she began, as she confronted a rather handsome middle-aged man in the president's office of the Longacre Iron works, "I'm Vivian Shippe, Jack's fiancée."

"Jack's what? Why, he never told me," ejaculated Stamford, senior. "I don't blame him," answered the girl, coolly, feeling her composure coming back, "and that's just what I've come here to talk to you about. You are simply ruling Jack. He hardly dares to breathe without your consent, and he has about as much initiative as a three-year-old. He's a molly-coddle, that's what he is, and it isn't his fault, either—it's yours, all yours. You think you're a devoted father, but he has no worse enemy in this whole world than you."

Stamford, red and spluttering, opened his mouth to speak, but Vivian silenced him with a look and went on: "He wanted to start out in business for himself, but you discouraged him. What if he did lose a few thousand? I'd rather have a man penniless who had tried and who had a backbone of his own than one who was scared to venture anything. I'm going to marry him because I love him, but I'd almost do it if it was only to save him from you, his devoted father."

"That's all I have to say," she ended. "I don't care how much you hate me—that'll do you good, but think over what I've said, will you?" With a nod she was gone. Once back in her car an outburst of pent-up emotion swept over her and her hands on the steering wheel trembled so that she could hardly drive. Reaching home, she rushed up the back stairs to her room and locked herself in. Two hours later the telephone rang.

"Say, dearest, got to see you right away. Coming now?" In a flash he had hung up and the girl had just time to dab some powder on her tear-stained face and straighten her tumbled hair.

"Whoops! The best news. It's a corker. Dad's a trump—always told you he was—called me up and we just had an interview and he told me he'd reconsidered the matter about my going into business and thought it was a good plan. Just as if that wasn't knockout enough he calmly handed me a check for $10,000 so as to give me a good start."

"What a perfect dear he is!" exclaimed Vivian. "Yes, but he acted awfully funny. I was a little worried for a while. After we got through he said, 'Son, if you have a best girl or anything of that sort, tell her that love is often blind, but not always lucrably so. I tried to get him to explain, but he just laughed and put on his head.'"

"The dear," said Vivian softly. "I believe I'd like to meet him now. I just know I'm going to love him."

A Striking Parisian Interpretation of the Value of Contrasts—Black and White Satin Being the Fabrics Employed.

(Copyright, 1929, by Fairchild.)

Vivian had accustomed us to many trick prolongations, such as a scarf cut in one with the garment, and other designers have naturally developed this idea. It is another marked characteristic of a season which is largely given over to producing the unusual in necklines.

The tendency is toward softened contours and a slightly higher line at the neck, this being compatible with the high waist-line. One frequently finds that when a lingerie collar is omitted, the fabric itself forms a collar of sorts, maybe a scarf capable of several adjustments. The accepted use of the bow continues, and is varied by self bows, or others, either of lace or some contrasting material. Beatha and narrow collars are much worn with or without matching cuffs. Cuffs are, usually deep and often daring in the good old gauntlet, or "bunchers cuff" manner.

SCOUT STUMBLES UPON ALIEN ENEMY'S GOLD

Sydney, Australia. (P.)—Set amid virgin bushland sloping down to Sydney Harbor, the Sydney Zoo, one of the most beautiful in the world, was the scene of an unexpected treasure discovery.

A boy scout campaigning among the trees, struck his foot against a glass jar thinly covered by earth. To his amazement, he found it full of glittering coins, $1,500 in gold.

Report of the find elicited a strange story from the headkeeper of the zoo. When the war broke out an old German, employed as an underkeeper, was afraid his savings would be confiscated. So he buried them. Then he went into the back country for ten years. Meanwhile some trees had been cut down and others had grown up, and though he searched until he was broken hearted he could not find his jar of gold.

Finally the impoverished old man set to work to earn enough money to go back to his native Bavarian village.

Now that his money is found he himself is lost. The treasure is held by the police while efforts are being made to trace him.

ADVISES BRITONS TO ESCHEW SKYSCRAPERS

London. (P.)—An American architect who builds skyscrapers has advised British architects not to erect any in London.

William A. Delano, president of the New York branch of the American Institute of Architects, speaking before the Architecture club in London, said he felt that Americans "are gradually being crushed by these monstrous, which have made life about as sterile as it can possibly be for the ordinary man."

"I hope you will not be captivated by this particular phase of our experiment," he said. "Unless you are ready to swallow our civilization whole, it would seem a mistake to copy any part of it."

SAY EUROPEAN UNION WAS NAPOLEON'S IDEA

Berlin, Dec. 21. (P.)—That Napoleon and not Aristotle Briand was the originator of the "United States of Europe" idea is brought out in the film "Napoleon on St. Helena," which has been shown in a Berlin theatre.

It is a historical fact that the Corsican, when after his defeat at Waterloo he was banished to St. Helena, confessed that his policy had been wrong.

The melody of European nations could never be fused into a permanently peaceful whole by the sword, he said, but only by the creation of a "federation des etats Europeens."

City's Beautiful Setting. Portland (Ore.) says a traveler, in the end of the old Oregon trail, and the center of a country as full of beauty as any in the world—calm, majestic beauty—and the dash of rippling waters amid towering mountain peaks—streams worth whipping—woodlands of gorgeous splendor—all things, to paraphrase Grover Cleveland, that are "good for one's soul."

Blaine-Molvin Draw In Flashy Semi-Final

Nick Zinna, local heavyweight, won the judges' decision over Harry Mulcahy Friday night at the armory in the eight-round main fight, which lacked the action of the semi-final in which Johnny Blaine and Charlie Molvin, two Kingston bantamweights, fought a draw.

Bass Wins by Knock-out in Second Round

The Molvin-Blaine set-to was a non-starter to finish. The fight from start to finish and at times it seemed that only a miracle held one or the other up. Both were in excellent condition for the scrap, which proved the best that either ever fought here.

Molvin put in his strongest bid for the decision in the early rounds, doing good work up until the fifth. In this round Blaine asserted himself with an attack that almost swept Charlie off his feet. Johnnie hit him with everything he had. Although Molvin showed that the beating was effective, he weathered it and Blaine lost his best chance for a knock-out.

In the sixth round Blaine tried to carry out the attack he started in the fifth, but could not finish the mill. For the remainder of the fight the bantam did some sensational toe-to-toe slugging. As the fans were waiting for Announcer Sam Riber to give out the judges' decision they loudly applauded Molvin and Blaine for their work, which went to make up one of the best exhibitions ever staged at the armory.

Zinna Wins

After witnessing the flashy eight-round, semi-final, the fans were set to exact much of the boys who went on in the main event. The patrons were rather disappointed though, for the fight was far below the calibre of the one that preceded it. Nick Zinna, however, did his share to make a pleasing battle of it, but he was hampered by Mulcahy's style. The New Yorker also proved too sturdy for Zinna to knock out. Nick showed his cleverness by feinting on leads and catching Mulcahy on the button a number of times. Although the wallop slowed him up, they lacked any effect by a big margin.

Buckman Outclassed

Pete "Kid" Buckman, scheduled to meet Eddie McKenna, of the Fighting 6th Regiment of New York, had to take on Augustine Perez instead. Buckman was wholly outclassed by Perez, who was too shifty for the Kid to catch with his hammer. Buckman's best chance to score a knock-out came in the last round. He and Perez were mixing it in a neutral corner and Buckman reached Augustine's stomach with a left that made him drop his guard and Pete sent a hard right to his chin. The two went into a clinch and the bell ended the fight.

Roy Van Buren of this city hammered out a decision over Eddie Ziegler of New York in a six rounder that slipped more and more into the clutches of the Kingston battler as the fight aged. Roy dropped Ziegler for the count of seven in the first round. In the fifth and sixth Van Buren pummeled Eddie with lefts and rights to the head that had him dizzy.

Jerry Samper of Poughkeepsie won the four rounder from Frenchy Dawig of this city, who substituted for Charlie Wiggins of West Point. Frenchy was the more aggressive battler. He dashed into Samper swinging wildly but was unable to effectively land his aimless blows. The few that the Poughkeepsie boy landed were short, straight punches that counted with the judges.

The judges were Joseph Mitchell and Samuel Jacobson. Tom Connelly of Syracuse was referee.

Kingston High Beats Catskill

Kingston High had a tough battle with Catskill Friday night on the mountain team's court. It wasn't until half time that the Maroon team took the lead, and then it was only by a point. Nevertheless, King's men finished on top by a score of 39 to 21. Catskill gave Kingston a surprise when they began collecting points at the opening whistle but the local school boys managed to stay in front by one point at the end of the first half.

Catskill pressed a successful point getting campaign in the first two quarters. It was Woodruff, Catskill's left forward, who found the hoop from scrimmage for the first score and his teammates followed. All this time Kingston found it hard to get started but when they got under way the score board indicated that the Maroon team was keeping in striking distance of Catskill's lead. The mountain team managed to hold a slim lead of two points as the quarter ended, 9-7.

At the beginning of the second quarter things continued to run along in the same channel. Catskill still maintained a tiny lead and Kingston was laboring hard to overcome it. It might appear that Kingston's defense was not what it should have been because Catskill was scoring steadily, but it wasn't Kingston's defense it was Catskill's keen eye forwards. They sunk them from the middle of the court. All this was stopped before the half ended and Kingston was leading, 15 to 14.

From then on the Maroon squad hit their stride and they played the basketball that they should. With a passwork far superior to Catskill's the second half was marked with Kingston's splendid teamwork. They worked the ball through the mountain team's defense at will and scored easily. As they improved in one department of the game so they improved in the other. Catskill began to test the Maroon defense but they were up against five well trained men. It was this kind of playing that led to Kingston's victory. The third quarter ended with Kingston holding a five-point lead, 21-16.

The last quarter saw Catskill slipping and Kingston gaining ground. Captain Blackwell, played his best game of the season. He not alone figured well in the defense but also in the offense. Blackwell rolled up 16 points and Post did his share of tallying finding the hoop for eight marks. With two good scoring men on the Maroon team Catskill had but one. Woodruff was the only man that did outstanding work for the mountain team's scoring end of the game. In spite of his efforts Catskill made they were behind, when the final whistle sounded, 30 to 21.

Sport Slants

The case of Philip Saffling, alias Phil Scott, may have to be referred to a special investigator before a definite conclusion can be reached.

The British heavyweight champion, balled Scotland Yard by a peculiar habit of remaining vertical longer than any other English pugilist has done in years. Phil now has supplanted the best American experts by defying the laws of gravity as well as all attempts to shuffle him out of the heavyweight picture.

Just where he belongs in the picture at the moment is not quite clear, but he is there, nevertheless, and regardless of any effort to ignore him. The critics gathered to see Victorio Campolo, the leaning tower of the Argentine, lean heavily upon Scott, but the agile Briton won on points without once hitting the floor. Again, the experts picked Otto Von Porat to dispose of Phil, but Otto made the mistake of aiming a left hook too low, and Referee Jack Dempsey, in some confusion, was obliged to mark up another victory for the invader.

This brings up a curious coincidence in Scott's record. It shows he has lost four decisions, been knocked out four times, figured in four draws and won four times on a foul in the last three years.

Except as a boxer who has improved in American competition, Scott has yet to impress the critics with his ability. He lacks aggressiveness and it is a question whether he can "take it." Phil has an apprehensive look every time he steps in the ring. He seems prepared for the worst while jabbing for the best. The pale Briton, meanwhile, remains among the three or four leading candidates for the headless heavyweight crown.

From the British angle, the workings of the master minds of American boxing may seem a trifle extraordinary. They would appear completely baffling, however, should there be a sustained move to shuffle Scott out of the heavyweight competition merely because, after being fouled by Von Porat, the Briton refused to stand up and be knocked out to satisfy the more blood-thirsty partisans of the ring.

Knute Rockne's remarkable record at Notre Dame needs few, if any, endorsements, but a little rapid figuring shows the impressive record of 105 victories, 13 defeats and 3 ties in 13 years of Rock's coaching for a percentage of .889. This year marked the fourth unbeaten season for the Fighting Irish since Jimmy Phelan, now Purdue's successful head coach, captained the first Rockne-coached eleven in 1917.

From all angles, the greatest years

Big Bill Freeman Kayoed by Benson

"Big Bill" Freeman, West Point cadet, kayoed Benson of Brooklyn in the 100th Infantry Army there Friday night when he tried to reclaim the championship that the Brooklynite took from him about two months ago.

A crowd of 6,000 saw the champion drop his rival with a hard left hook followed by a right cross after two minutes of the first round had elapsed. The titleholder scaled 183½ pounds to his opponent's 165½.
